

FYP

Pacing ourselves as we support (and believe) in our individual causes can be very challenging. But how do we find your pace when it comes to our involvement in patriotic, political, religious, and moral views and activities?

As mentioned in prior articles on FYP, we addressed knowing who you are, and the steps necessary to take, that will point you in the direction you want to go. In this case, we are focusing on how to get your message across, loud and clear.

Currently we are facing significant fundamental changes in America that you and I may, or may not agree on. Regardless, now is the time to stand up and be heard.

Find the right pace. This is your pace, and with that, a chance to share what you stand for. This is you standing up for what you believe in; not just to those you know will listen, but to others who may need that “nudge” to wake them up, and open their eyes.

In my opinion, never before in our history, since the days and months leading up to the America Revolution, has there ever been something as important as this. The time has come for all American's to unite. We have a very serious enemy in our midst; not just a threat from those who want to do harm, but instead an evil entity who want to annihilate us, and our fellow countrymen and women all together.

Friend or Foe? Be sure you can tell one from the other.
